LITERARY NOTES.

Miss Kathleen O'Mears, the biographer of Madame Mohl has, it is reported, placed in the hands of the Harpers a striking novel which they will soon publish. A novelette entitled "Brueton's Bayou" has been written by John Habberton, and will appear in the next number of Lippincott. The publishers propose to print hereafter in each number a complete short avoel.

The first number of "The Quarterly Journal of Economics"—the publication of which is provided for by the gift of Mr. John E. Thayer, of Harvard—will be brought out next week. Professor Dunbar aunounces that the journal will not represent any special school or body of economic doctrine, but is to be devoted strictly to the production of scientific investigation and discus sion. It will contain signed articles from writers within and without the university; shorter papers and notes on topics of interest; correspondence showing the movement of accounts thought in the showing the movement of economic thought in the principal foreign countries; a condensed bibliography of publications in political economy for the preceding quarter; and such reprinted matter as may be useful and in-teresting. The first number offers these papers; "The Reaction in Political Economy," by Charles F. Dunbar; "Private Monopolies and Public Rights," by Arthur T. Hadley; "Silver Before Congress in 1886," by S. Dana Horton; and "An Historical Study of Law's System. Part 1," by A. Macfarland Davis.

Margaret Sidney's new book will be entitled "Hester, and other New-England Stories."

Mr. Elter Fawcett's new novel, "The House at High Bridge," comes from the Ticknor press next week. The scene opens with two of the characters stepping off an

Ticknor will bring out at the same time his new and handsome holiday reprint of Scott's "Lay of the Last Minatrel," and Senator Morrill's "Selfconsciousness of Noted Persons."

At an auction sale which is to take place at Colorne, near the end of this month, a number of treasures in the way of rare books and MSS, will be disposed of. Among way of rare books and MSS, will be disposed of. Anothe these are: The first printed letter of Columbus on the discovery of America from the press of Stephan Planck at Rome, according to Brunet, as distinct from a reprint of the same year, 1493; a Latin-German Vocabulary, printed 1469, with Gutonberg's types: P. Schoeffer's Laber VI decretainum on veilum, 1473; a Carthusian Missal, 1490; and a very rare xylograpic print of Historia Reatie Marie Virginis. Less rare xylographic prints, such as Historia S. Johannia and the Ars Movieudi fetched 14,500 france and 18,000 france, respectively, at the Didot sale in 1879. B. Westerman & Co. have a part of the catalogue and are ready to take orders from bidders.

General Lew Wallace, in talking of "Ben Hur" to a writer for The Detroit Journal, the other day, said concerning its history: "You remember, perhaps, that 'Ben Hur' is divided into books. The first book, carrying the story down to the Birth of Christ, was written with ne distinct motive. I regarded it as complete and intended some day to send it to a magazine as a serial. At that time I did not trouble myself to inquire as to religious matters, and if I went to church it was to hear an eloquent speaker, for the sake of his eloquence. One day I met Colonel In-gersoil and he began to talk to me in his wonderful way —for he is very wonderful, in brain and eloquence. After that talk I determined that, cost what it might, I would investigate and decide for myself as to the divinity of Christ. It seemed to me that to continue 'Ben Hur' would give me a pretext and a system of work, and for five long years I studied the life of Christ and the history, customs and traditions of his people and country. This I did by the aid of maps and books of travel, until I had accumulated what I believe to be the largest collection of maps of the East owned by any individual in America and had a knowledge of my subject which, I may say without egotism, was superior to that of many who had travelted to the Holy Land. I had gone but a few steps in this work before I came to the conclusion that Christ was divine and entitled to respect and that all He claimed for himself He should receive. I am not now a church member. When I arrive at a strange hotel on Sunday I ask the way to the nearest church, if it is always good enough for me. When 'Ben Hur' was complete I went to the Holy Land and spent months in visiting every place referred to in order to verify my General Wallace says that his forthcoming nock is a omance of Turkish life founded upon his observations in the East. He declares that when travelling he writes anywhere and at any time, as the opportunit I carry a scratch book and write on the cars, if I have no one to talk to. Composition is sometimes very difficult for me; the facility will desert me and for a day at a time I cannot write a paragraph to please me. On such days I force myself to keep at work, rewriting my matter time after time, and suddenly the ice gives way and it is all easy again."

The holiday number of The Illustrated Graphic News promises to be one especially creditable to American ariists. It is to have sixty pages of original sketches and reproductions and several double supplements printed in colors. Mr. de Thulstrup's picture, "In the Treuches," will be printed in eight colors. This paper improves with every number, both in its text and illus-

The Rev. Robert Yuck will soon publish, through Mr. Whittaker, a book with the suggestive title of "A Handbook of Biblical Difficulties, or Reasonable Solutions of Perplexing Things in Sacred Scriptures."
